Thank you all for helping make Wednesday's ceremonial HB166 PFD Check-Off bill signing a tremendous success. Whether you helped usher the concept through the multiyear legislative process, moved the bill across key desks to get it signed, rolled up your sleeves and got working on implementation, or came to show your support at the bill signing, we could never have had such a wonderful event without you. Thank you!

A local legislator recently opined that the legislature's priority in special session should be Fairbanks' short-term energy needs. Of course, we all know that Fairbanks and other communities across the state are suffering the impact of sudden high energy costs. And many have encouraged Gov. Sarah Palin to lead us where your legislative leaders failed during the regular session, and she's doing it.

But this special session isn't about short-term energy needs — it's about enabling a gas line to be built that will serve Alaskans for the next 100 years. With the right gas line comes the opportunity for Fairbanks to enjoy low-cost gas comparable with any place in the nation.

One of the "must-haves" in the Alaska Gasline Inducement Act is "distance sensitive" rates. That is, gas coming down the "big line" must carry gas to five state take-off points. The corresponding tariff, the transportation cost, will be the average of the cost to each take-off point and no further. That means natural gas in Fairbanks will be less than in Alberta (some 1,300 miles distant) and at the Henry Hub (Oklahoma/Louisiana). Bottom line? Off the "big line," Fairbanks will have low-cost natural gas. It won't be cheap, but it will be low-cost. The price of our gas, at the Fairbanks flange, will be low, not only because of this short transportation tariff, but also because the fixed and operating costs to carry each gas molecule down the pipe will be spread over 4.5 billion cubic feet of gas per day, not over a much smaller line. Our savings are simply a matter of the economies of scale.

In addition to a take-out point to provide natural gas to Fairbanks, there is an opportunity for a "bullet line." The recent Gasline Determination Public Forums repeatedly underscored the fact that the legislature does not have to choose between a short-term supply to Fairbanks delivered through a small "bullet line" and the "big line" to Alberta delivering 4.5 billion cubic feet a day. AGIA does not preclude a "bullet line" if it is needed and is deemed competitive with hydro power (Susitna Dam or the like) or an enhanced development of the Cook Inlet basin (which is thought to contain as much as 17 trillion cubic feet of reserves, according to the USGS). At the forums, the experts explained construction of a "spur line" becomes much more likely if the larger pipeline project moves forward first.

On a separate note, I hope Alaskans fully appreciate the value of the state assisting TransCanada with development costs leading to project approval by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. This cost sharing secures a world-renowned, multibillion-dollar company as a partner that has, by all accounts, a sterling reputation for bringing projects in on time and on budget. TransCanada has agreed to enforceable steps toward the actual construction of a gas line. They have also pledged to expand the line in a manner that will not price any newcomers wishing to invest in Alaska out of the market. This in turn will provide meaningful incentives for new exploration and production across the North Slope.

Additionally, the investment of up to $500 million will result in slightly lower transportation costs in the pipeline which will increase, to Alaskans, the wellhead value of the gas. During the life of the line, this will result in increased earnings to the state well in excess of the initial investment. That means we get our $500 million back, plus millions more. In short, our financial participation to get the project rolling with a capable partner gets us many meaningful commitments and the cash is paid back over time. The competing "Denali" proposal contains none of these commitments.

Additionally Alaska is telling the natural gas world, and our Congress, that we are ready to put forward a portion of our oil revenues to make Alaska's gas America's gas as envisioned by the federal government when Congress passed the groundbreaking Alaska Natural Gas Pipeline Act of 2004. The $500 million is an investment that pays returns for generations. To characterize it as a "subsidy" is simply wrongheaded; it's an investment by any definition of the word. We should do it and we should be proud of it.

It's time for vision and courage as we begin to move Fairbanks to an alternative energy source. It's time to use America's thirst for gas to benefit our town and our state. It's time to do it right and it's time to vote "Yes" on AGIA.

Gary Wilken is a state senator representing Fairbanks and Fort Wainwright in District E.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

No. 08-060

Governors Urge Congress to Support Energy Security Programs

June 17, 2008, Anchorage, Alaska - Governor Sarah Palin and Governor Joe Manchin III of West Virginia are urging Congress to support federal-state programs that assist states in promoting energy security. Governor Manchin is chair of the Natural Resources Committee for the National Governors Association, and Governor Palin serves as vice chair.

Given recent energy price increases and projected long-term growth in energy demand, both governors are calling on Congress to support efforts to conserve energy resources while actively seeking to diversify supplies by expanding renewable resources.

In a joint letter, Governors Palin and Manchin urged members of the House and Senate Appropriations Committees to fully fund the Energy Policy Act of 2005 and the Energy Independence and Security Act of 2007.

"We can't afford to just talk about energy security," said Governor Palin. "In these uncertain economic times, states must leverage investments to promote efficient renewable energy projects."

The National Governors Association promotes visionary state leadership, shares best practices and speaks with a unified voice on national policy. Its members are the governors of the 50 states and five territories.

We must take action on the bill before June 25th.

Please let me know if you like this suggestion.

Subject: Kenai Area Issues

Governor,

Randy is working with several folks in Kenai on various DOT and OMB related issues. He has also spoken with Glen Martin who may stop over to say hi at tomorrow's events. Glen's issues are related to a Keystone Drive project, oversight of that project, and contractors complaining of fuel escalation fees in project bids. Leo is looking at the fuel escalation issue but the fix isn't as easy as relayed. Randy followed up with DOT's Gordon Keith and DOT does plan to oversee this project's engineering and design work. Other issues Randy mentioned you may hear about are all being worked on as well:

- The Marathon road issue may be resolved this Thursday at a meeting we arranged with Leo.
- The decision that the crime lab will be located in Anchorage was made and communicated to Rick months ago by Walt.
- The $18 million dollar capital project for bluff erosion is a budget issue for next session and information on it should go to OMB.
- DOT says they cannot put the Sterling Highway project into the STIP because there is not enough funds to complete the project and federal regs donâ€™t allow them to put projects in the STIP anymore if full funding of the project is not reasonably foreseeable, and the project is not a statewide priority.

As we discussed, we'll direct any folks with questions to Randy. If you have any further questions please let us know and we can track them down.

There are also now 3 entities wanting the cost and project information from KABATA; FHWA, the State, and AMATS. FHWA must approve the project and sign the Record of Decision (ROD) for the project to move forward. Frank Richards and I met with FHWA last week. FHWA has been working on their own review of the project and have a lot of the same questions we do. FHWA will probably not sign the Record of Decision on the NEPA process KABATA needs to actually build until KABATA provides satisfactory answers to all the questions. FHWA also asked if they could work with the State to review the project, which we agreed to do. AMATS has also asked KABATA for cost and project information. AMATS could amend their Long Range Transportation Plan to remove the project which would stop it cold.

Governor - I received a call from Keith Hamilton, President of the Christian College in Kenai (approx. 5 min.) from Kenai Landings. He would like the Governor to visit the campus briefly. I stated to Mr. Hamilton that your schedule is booked during the Bill Signing and asked if he was going to attend. He said he was going to try to attend as he also attends Chamber events.

I just wanted you aware in case he approaches with this request. I did let Frank know earlier too. I have discouraged this in terms of timing. Janice
